Mrs. O'Meara, who seems to have been possessed of more curiosity than the average woman, was found perched the other night on a fire-escape at Yonkers, N. Y., taking in a lodge of Red men who were performing some of their mystic rites. Out of deference to her they suspended proceedings until a policeman removed her. She thought it a good joke and informed the policeman that she had caught on to the doings of the Odd Fellows and Masons in the same way. She isn't a bit afraid of a goat now, if he has horns.

Just about the time they had got the search-light system so perfected that vessels could light up the seas and see other vessels sneaking around, here comes a Frenchman with the alleged discovery of a pigment which will render boats painted with it invisible under the search-light. That's the way it goes. One man invents a steel plate that no shot can bore and then another fellow invents a gun that will bore it like a cheese. Inventor against inventor, with no guessing what will come next.

Bishop Potter, of New York, is not very enthusiastic over the Dingley tariff. On returning home from Europe some friend who believed in the solacing virtues of Scotch whiskey, presented him with two cases. When the customs officers at New York took the dimensions of the two cases and sized them up they figured out the tariff duty at $40, which the Reverend gentleman had to pay, of course, or let his friend's gift be declared contraband. The Bishop's religious training prevented him from giving free expression to his sentiments.

There are several Passes by which the gold adventurers go from the coast to the interior of Alaska. The Chilkoot Pass is from 2,600 to 3,600 feet high, the Chilkat Pass 5,000, the White Pass 2,600. The Taku Pass in the safest, but being the longest, about ninety miles, most of the gold seekers take one of the others. Being caught in either of them in a storm means that the man who is caught may pass in his chips, and supplemental proceedings will interest him no more.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

VARIOUS MATTERS CONSIDERED AT YESTERDAY'S MEETING.

S. A. L. Advertising Scheme—Reports of Committees—The Project of a Steamship Line Between Wilmington and European Ports.

The Chamber of Commerce met yesterday afternoon at 8.30 o'clock, President Jas. H. Chadbourn, Jr., presiding, and Col. Jno. L. Cantwell secretary. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved, and President Chadbourn then announced that Mr. E. C. Quarles, of Portsmouth, Va., representing the Seaboard Air Line, was present and would like to address the meeting.

Mr. Quarles stated that the Seaboard Air Line was getting up a book, as an official shippers' guide, which was not an advertising scheme but simply one of the many things the Seaboard Air Line are continually getting up to influence trade to points along its road; that the book would contain the names of all the leading merchants along the road, etc. Mr. Quarles further stated that if the Chamber of Commerce would endorse the book as a good advertising medium that he would give the Chamber two pages of advertising matter in the book for nothing. Mr. Quarles then withdrew from the meeting, and after discussion by Messrs. Marcus W. Jacobi, T. D. Meares and others, the Chamber, on motion of Mr. W. E. Worth, approved the book as a good means of advertising.

These shipping directories, which the S. A. L. intends to get up, will contain much useful information, enclosed between two handsome cloth covers, and will be distributed along the S. A. L line as far West as St. Louis, as far North as Boston, and as far South as Jacksonville, Fla.

The next business in order was the report of the different committees.

A written report from Col. Walker Taylor, chairman of the Entertainment Committee, was read, and, on motion, the committee was discharged with thanks.

A written report from Mr. C. E. Borden, acting treasurer of the committee appointed by the Chamber to represent Wilmington at the Centennial Exposition at Nashville, Tenn., was read, and the committee likewise discharged with thanks.

The following report was also read, viz.

To the Chamber of Commerce, City:

Your committee appointed June 4th to look into the advisability of New Hanover and Brunswick counties purchasing the property of the Brunswick Bridge and Ferry Company, with a view of making it a free ferry, beg to report that they cannot recommend a purchase at the price the property is held at.

[Signed] THOS F BAGLEY, Chr.,
D. L. GORE
J. B. MERCER,
MARCUS W. JACOBI.

President Chadbourn called attention to the fact that the Chamber's lease on its present meeting place would soon expire, and new quarters would have to be sought.

Mr. W. E. Worth said that his idea was that the Chamber should build a brick building for its own use.

Mr. D. L. Gore said that he thought it would be a good plan for the Chamber of Commerce and the Produce Exchange to build together, the building to be used jointly.

After some further discussion the matter was left open.

A communication from Messrs. Calder Bros. in regard to a morning train on the Wilmington & Newbern Railroad, was read, in which Messrs. Calder Bros. stated that the present arrangement of the schedule helped the mercantile interests, as countrymen could come to Wilmington and depart the same day.

A letter was read from Mr. C. E. Borden, who was appointed by President Chadbourn to look into the matter, in which Mr. Borden stated that he had seen General Manager J. R. Kenly, who assured him if any change in the schedule was made it would be so arranged that a train would arrive in Wilmington early in the morning and depart late in the afternoon.

Mr. Marcus W. Jacobi said that in view of Wilmington not having a "Welcome Week, he would suggest the following plan, as effected by the Chamber of Commerce of Richmond, Va., as the following extract from a letter from a friend in Richmond would show, viz:

We beg to advise you that through efforts of committee of Chamber of Commerce of this city there has been secured from Southern Railroad, Atlantic Coast Line and Seaboard Air Line reduced rates for round trip to Richmond of one fare for the round trip, on sale the 12th, 13th and 14th insts., limit fifteen days from date of sale, from any point on their respective roads. The movement is the outcome of a desire of the part of Richmond wholesale merchants to afford their friends and customers an opportunity of conveniently and economically visiting Richmond and to become personally acquainted with the heads and managers of the firms with whom they have business transactions.

A letter from Rev. Peyton H. Hoge, D. D., expressing his regret at not being present at the meeting of the Chamber at Wrightsville beach, and also speaking in favor of the Lyceum Association, was read.

President Chadbourn stated that a letter and a map had been received from Capt. W. K. Craighill, in which he gives the river from Wilmington to the bar 18 feet at dead low water and 20 feet over the bar. The secretary was instructed to write a letter of thanks to Capt. Craighill for the map, etc.

Mr. W. E. Worth called the Chamber's attention to several sugar beets which had been raised about four miles from the city.

A letter was read from Mr. Fred Harper, expressing regret at Senator Daniel not being able to attend the meeting at Wrightsville beach.

Mr. A. J. Howell, of the committee appointed to see about the establishment of a steamship line between this port and Europe, read the following letter, received from Simpson, Spence & Young, New York city:

NEW YORK Aug. 5, 1897.

Jas H. Chadbourn, Jr., Esq., President Wilmington Chamber of Commerce, Wilmington:

DEAR SIR:—We duly received your favor of 20th ult., and thank you very much for writing us so fully. Our reply has been deferred, as we wished to turn over the matter of a Wilmington service thoroughly in our minds. We may say frankly that there are reasons personal to ourselves, which give us especial interest in establishing a regular line from Wilmington to European ports, and we would very much like to co-operate with your Chamber of Commerce, which has shown its earnest desire to put Wilmington on a par with other ports as regards regular and reliable communication with Europe. We feel, however, considerable hesitation in taking hold of the scheme with nothing more than the friendly assurances of the A. C. L. They would be bound to nothing, while the responsibility of the charter and freight contracts would all be on our shoulders. It would be anything but a pleasant situation to find ourselves with one or two steamers on our hands unable to get more than part cargoes for them. Much as we should like to make a start, it really seems too much like a leap in the dark. It must be borne in mind that other ports enjoy substantial support from the railroads in one form and another, which afford reasonable assurance of safety to steamship lines. We do not very well see how Wilmington can expect the same facilities without affording an equal measure of support. You will see from the enclosed circular that we have recently established a line from Charleston. The railroads there, we may say for your information, have shown more than a sympathetic interest, and we know, therefore, on what ground we are treading. Do you think your railroads, merchants, etc., would be willing to contribute to the stock of a company formed to operate a steamship line from Wilmington and to develop exports of general merchandise through your port? Such a company could doubtless depend on the active, rather than the passive co operation of railroads and others, and with an organization of that nature behind us we would feel success pretty certain and merely a matter of time. The idea is thrown out for what it may be worth, as we have not considered it closely. We can only again say that we are very desirous of aiding in the development of the export traffic through Wilmington, and feel sure that under proper conditions the results would be everything that could be desired. It does seem that with other ports all bestirring themselves, Wilmington should not lag behind.

Yours very truly,
SIMPSON, SPENCE & YOUNG.

Mr. Howell stated that he had seen the different railroad authorities, and that they were willing to lend a helping hand. He then made a motion that the committee be discharged, and a new committee be appointed by the President at his leisure, to continue the plans mapped out. The committee was discharged with thanks, and Mr. Howell's motion in regard to the appointment of a new committee was carried.

The meeting then adjourned.

RUNGE-LOFTIN.

A Pretty Wedding Yesterday Afternoon.

A pretty wedding took place yesterday afternoon at 6 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. Johanna H. Runge, No. 811 South Fifth street, Miss Mamie Runge and Mr. Ike C. Loftin forming the union for life.

The ceremony was performed at the dwelling of the bride's mother, and the interior of the residence was handsomely and artistically decorated for the occasion. The bride entered the room, where the auspicious event was celebrated, leaning on the arm of her brother, Mr. J. T. Runge, and the groom, accompanied by his best man, Mr. Fred A. Bissenger, then advanced, met the bride, and the happy couple were joined together by Rev. K. Boldt, of St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran church. After the ceremony the friends and immediate family of the contracting parties, who were the only ones present, repaired to another portion of the house, where an elegant wedding supper was awaiting. Mr. and Mrs. Loftin left on the 7.15 o'clock Atlantic Coast Line North-bound train for an extended bridal tour.

The bride was attired in a handsome dark tailor-made suit, and carried a large bouquet of Bride's roses, while her maid of honor, her sister, Miss Katie Runge, was becomingly habited in white, and carried a bunch of La France roses.

The wedding music was in charge of Miss Mamie Steijes, who after the entrance of the bridal party, rendered Mendelssohn's wedding march.

Mr. Loftin was for a number of years employed with the firm of C. W. Polvogt & Co.

The vote was light."

RALEIGH NEWS.

Governor Russell Called Out Military in Asheville to Prevent the Lynching of Brackett—Populist Executive Committee Meeting.

[Special Star Telegram.]

RALEIGH, N. C., August 11.—Though Cary township cast a majority vote in favor of school tax, the vote was not a majority of the registered voters, as required. This defeats the tax in every township in Wake county.

The Governor ordered out the Asheville military company to-day in response to a request of Sheriff Worley, and used every effort to prevent the lynching of the negro Brackett. He also sent a telegram to Locke Craige and V. S. Lusk, urging them to appeal to citizens to prevent mob murder. "The negro," he telegraphed, "can be hung in two weeks if the jury will convict. If he is guilty and the jury refuse to convict, there would be more excuse for lynching the jury."

About thirty Populists are here attending the committee meeting. Congressmen Shouford, Strowd and Fowler are here.

COLORED FIREMEN.

State Association in Session at Winston—Cape Fear Company of Wilmington Gave an Exhibition.

[Special Star Telegram.]

WINSTON, N. C., August 11.—The colored State Firemen's Association had a creditable parade and transacted routine business to-day. All of the contests take place to-morrow afternoon. Officers will be elected in the morning; also, the time and place will be selected for the next convention and tournament.

The Cape Fear steamer and company, of Wilmington, gave a pretty exhibition this afternoon, throwing as many as six streams at one time.

Held For Trial at Goldsboro.

The family of Richard H. Hunter, the colored man who was arrested in Goldsboro for assault with a deadly weapon, was raising funds yesterday to send a lawyer to Goldsboro to defend and furnish bail for Hunter. The Argus of Tuesday says:

The negro R. H. Hunter, who was left here by the excursion yesterday, and who subsequently drew a pistol on the police at the ticket office, was given a hearing before Mayor Hill yesterday afternoon and was bound over to the Superior Court in the sum of $100 for the assault, and $50 for carrying concealed weapons. He was carried to jail.

WILMINGTON, N. C.

THURSDAY MORNING, AUG. 12, 1897

ON THE DOWN GRADE.

In their rejoicing over the anticipated return of prosperity, as the result of the advance in the price of wheat (which is an accident and in no way the result of forethought or of legislation), the rejoicers seem to forget that with the exception of wheat everything else that has advanced in price is covered by the new tariff, and that the advance in the price of these does not extend to foreign markets. The American people are compelled to pay more for the protected articles, not because there is a greater demand for them, but because the new tariff by keeping foreign goods out makes consumers pay more. But while the price of protected articles has gone up, everything else with the exception of wheat has gone down. Why? Because there is a foreign demand for wheat. Other countries need it for bread and this is about the only country they can get it from. They will need about 223,000,000 bushels, about as much as we will have to spare, if not a little more. This puts the price up and will probably keep it up until the surplus is disposed of.

The protectionists rejoice in our prosperity as if it was a result of happy legislation, apparently oblivious of the fact that for it we are under obligations to the droughts and other destructive conditions that blasted the wheat crops of some countries and shortened those of others. Had Providence smiled on the farmers of other countries as He did on the farmers of this country our farmers would have had plenty of wheat and very little money and the industrial depression would be indefinitely protracted in spite of the Dingley "prosperity producer."

Some of the gold men who are not protectionists understand why there is an improvement in business, with which the Dingley job has had nothing to do, but they do not seem to understand why prices should still be on the down grade. One of these is the Chattanooga Times, from which we clip the following editorial:

"Those who are asserting that the prospective great increase in the production of gold must bring down gold and raise silver in commercial value do not seem to take a sound view of the future, any more than they do concerning the past. We asked the other day why, if inevitably, an enlarged product of gold raised the price of silver and other commodities, the phenomenal growth of gold output since 1891, has failed to have that effect. The question has not been and never will be answered. It is a fact that, while the gold product has grown fast in the last six years, and was $95,000,000 more in 1896 than in 1891, prices of all things were generally on the down grade, including silver. Yet, according to those who "prove everything" by the effect of the gold rush of 1849 53 on prices, there should have been a boom instead of a depression, after 1893, since there has been a conspicuous enlargement of gold.

"The fact is, the conditions of 1891 97 are radically different from those of 1849 53, and those who reason from the earlier era to the later, are sure to go wrong and run their theory against a stone wall of facts, and shiver the theory.

"So those who look only at the prospective great product of gold, and look not at all to the present and future demand for gold, will find their conclusions as to the effect of the supply on prices, go in a disappointing way.

"Let us look at the matter of demand a little. Russia will absorb, besides what the czar's prisoners dig for him in Siberia, at least $30,000,000, or say $50,000,000 a year, all told. Japan is in the market for nothing less than $300,000,000 of gold, and will take it all in the next ten years, sooner if it can be had. Austria is still absorbing gold, and must have $150,000,000 more, to put her currency in a satisfactory condition. The United States will, within a few years, unload her silver and put gold in its place, taking say $600,000,000 in the next quarter century. All these States, except our own country, were silver States, up to within five years of this date; some of them changed this year and last. Then we have the South American republics going to the gold basis as rapidly as they can get there. In all there will be use for an average of $200,000,000 to $300,000,000 gold, for coinage alone, every year of the next twenty-five. The demand will be fully up to the supply, and hence there will be no weakening in the value of the metal, and no relative advance in the market value of silver. The demand for gold is what has stimulated its production of late years, and the extraordinary increase of production has increased demand. But for the larger output Austria, Russia, Japan and South America would have gone on with silver money, instead of making the change to gold.

"There is not the least danger but all the gold the world produces will be absorbed promptly, by the demand for coinage and the arts. There never was such a demand for the metal; the only danger is that the supply may become short, instead of overpassing the demand and causing a glut."

This is a gold paper talking, a gold paper which like the New Orleans Picayune, from which we recently quoted, sees no danger of an overstock of gold and no probability of the increase in the gold output booming prices. It did it in 1849–53 and for some time after, but isn't doing it now, which seems to puzzle them and according to them to puzzle others, for no one, they say, can account for it. The output of gold from the mines of California in the early days gave prices a lift and business of all kinds a boom; there is no doubt of that, but they do not seem to take into account the fact that with the mines of California and shortly afterwards of Australia we had silver money which was the legal and accepted equal of gold, that there was no speculating in nor hoarding of gold. It was money, was used as money and went not into the vaults of speculators but into the channels of trade to stimulate and keep business up. If there had been but one money then and that money gold it would have been a subject of speculation then as it is now and instead of going into the channels of trade it would have gone into the vaults of the banks, as it does now and has done since 1873 when silver was degraded and legislation gave enhanced value to gold.

It is the greater purchasing power of gold which is controlled by the great money combines that puts prices on the down grade. They control the gold and in controlling that control the prices of things that are bought with it. It is only when necessity compels that they let prices go up. But they, as well as others must have bread to eat and when bread in scarce speculation begins in it and prices go up. But the prices of everything else go down because, when they are not forced to buy they pay only their own price and controlling the money as they do, they can fix the prices, when country does not compete against country. If we now had the double standard as we had when the output of California gold started the boom, the increased output of gold might now create another boom, but there is no booming property in it because it is under the present monetary system a hoarding and not a circulating metal.

MINOR MENTION.

The appointment of negroes to several important and lucrative offices in the South has stirred up a racket that may give the Republican party some trouble later on. There is a vigorous kicking against it by the white Republicans of the South, and an equally vigorous kicking by colored men in some of the Northern States, who are disgruntled at the discrimination practiced against them, while the negro in the South, who does not render the party anything like as effective service is recognized and rewarded. The kick of the white Republicans in the South does not amount to so much, but the kick of the colored contingent in some of the Northern States might possibly prove a very serious matter, if the kicking should continue until another election. In several States on the other side of the line they are an important factor in politics, and these votes are absolutely necessary to the success of the Republican party, and yet in not one of these States has any negro been appointed to any responsible position, notwithstanding that there are negroes in their States who have enjoyed educational and other opportunities to qualify them for the positions to which they might aspire. But they are not in it. Their color is against them. For voting purposes their color is all right, but when it comes to holding office that is another matter. The color line holds in the North but not in the South. Northern colored men are beginning to see it, and perhaps they may do some serious and troublesome thinking on that line.

* * *

We called attention some time ago to the outspoken and sensible resolutions adopted by the colored preachers' association in Halifax county, Virginia. Their resolutions have already begun to bear fruit, for they have opened the mouths of colored preachers in other States, some of whom take a very wise view of it and give some very good advice. One of these is Rev. H. H. Proctor, pastor of a Congregational Church in Atlanta, who delivered a sermon recently which began as follows:

"Here in our section we are divided on race lines. Whether we will it or not the division exists, and wise men accept things as they are and try to make them as they ought to be. The crimes that provoke are generally laid at the door of the black race, while the crimes that retaliate are put to the charge of the other race. If you belong to that race charged with the crimes that retaliate, you should try to create a sentiment against that class of crimes. If you belong to that race charged with the crimes that provoke, you should try to create a sentiment against that class of crimes."

That's good advice all 'round, but there is one thing certain and that is that it would be difficult if not impossible to "create a sentiment against the crime that retaliates" while the crimes that provoke the retaliation continue to be perpetrated. The speedy trial and punishment by law would doubtless do much, and perhaps might entirely prevent this retaliation, but until the law promptly comes to the rescue and punishes these crimes, public sentiment will not be changed when the conviction is so strong that speedy retribution is necessary for the protection of mothers and daughters. In the meantime while efforts should be made to render the laws more effective the colored people should follow the advice of Mr. Proctor and "create a sentiment against the crime that provokes retaliation."

* * *

It must not be inferred that the people of this State are opposed to public schools because they voted against the special tax last Tuesday, although the ballots read "for schools," "against schools," instead of "for the special tax," against the special tax," as they should have read if they had been truthfully and honestly worded. The wording adopted was a trick, to which we called attention some time ago, to influence voters who might not like to be put in position as opposed to schools. The trick didn't work. But there were good and sufficient reasons why the friends of the schools should be opposed to this tax, for the taxes in this State, although not as high as in some other States, are high in proportion to the ability of the people to bear in these stringent times, as the delinquent tax lists amply testify, and the people wisely declined to take upon themselves additional and unnecessary burdens. That was one reason, and another very good one was that the taxpayers of this State are not satisfied with the administration of our public affairs and had their doubts as to the use that would be made of this special tax, if voted. And many were influenced by the compulsory character of the law, which seemed to be framed to worry the people into voting for or against it whether they wanted to or not. When the time comes, and the question is presented in a proper way, the people of this State will very cheerfully vote for additional school tax if it should be necessary.

The champion contribution lifter is Rev. A. B. Simpson, of New York. At a meeting at Old Orchard, Maine, he stirred 'em up so that the women tore off their jewelry and threw it into the collection boxes, while men threw in deeds to real estate (they seem to carry an assortment of things in that State) and others turned their pocket-books inside out. He got about $70,000 out out of 20,000 people for foreign missions.

— Charlotte News: G. C. L. Junker, a Populist justice of the peace, elder of the church, leading politician and land owner of Crab Orchard township, made application before the board of county commissioners yesterday to have his aged mother admitted to the poorhouse of the county. The board refused the application.

It is said that it completely ruined several crops of corn and tobacco. —— Jim Taylor, a noted moonshiner, was arrested and brought here last Sunday, charged with distilling and retailing. — Goldsboro Argus: The death of Mr. Jas. E. Rasberry occurred last (Monday) night at his home near the city. He was about 45 years of age, and his death was the result of a recent attack of illness. He was in town last Saturday and looking well. —— Tom Pate, a white man who has before figured on the criminal docket of the Superior Court, and for whom the police have been keeping watch for the past twelve months, has been arrested and placed in jail to await the next term of the Superior Court and answer to the charge of an assault upon a white lady of this city. —— A young negro, about 18 years old, who has been attending to Dr. J. D. Spicer's horses in this city and doing odd jobs about the premises, was caught secreted in his residence last night, having effected an entrance by cutting the latch of the back door. He was turned over to the police, and is now in jail to await trial for burglary at the coming September term of court. ——William Haywood, colored, the last and probably the most important of the three negroes implicated in the "Shoofly" wrecking case, was arrested in Norfolk county in the suburbs of Portsmouth one day last week and brought to this city and placed in jail to-day. Charles Normel, one of the other two implicated in the affair, is now serving his sentence in the penitentiary, and Whitley is under bond for his appearance at court.

Suffered 20 Years.

MRS. MARY LEWIS, wife of a prominent farmer, and well known by all old residents near Belmont, N. Y., writes: "For twenty-seven years I had been a constant sufferer from nervous prostration, and paid large sums of money for doctors and advertised remedies without benefit. Three years ago my condition was alarming; the least noise would startle and unnerve me. I was unable to sleep, had a number of sinking spells and slowly grew worse. I began using Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and Nerve and Liver Pills. At first the medicine seemed to have no effect, but after taking a few bottles I began to notice a change; I rested better at night, my appetite began to improve and I rapidly grew better, until now I am as nearly restored to health as one of my age may expect. God bless Dr. Miles' Nervine."

CURRENT COMMENT.

—— "Experience in the past," the St Louis Post-Dispatch shrewdly remarks, "has shown that when the Government goes into partnership with private interest to promote prosperity is usually cornered by the Government's partners.—The work of cornering prosperity has already commenced." The rise in trust stocks and in the price of commodities controlled by monopolists is the evidence of the process.—Charleston News and Courier, Dem

—— The director of the mint discovers that his masters of this country and Europe have figured silver down until its commercial value, compared with gold, is 37 to 1. There is no reason why they should not reduce it to 50 to 1. They have the power to do it, and the same methods which depressed silver to 37 to 1 would, if continuously and systematically applied, depress it to 50 to 1. This is the most convincing proof that the people are in the hands of the Philistines of Wall and Lombard streets.—Louisville Dispatch, Dem

—— The negro porter who robbed the United States treasury of $18 while handling money sacks for weighing, will probably be given a term in the penitentiary for his dishonesty, But Dingley Aldrich, Jones, & Co. who foisted upon the country a measure which successfully robs the people for the benefit of a few trusts are now enjoying a rest at the seaside or in the mountains. To some men, however, it is one thing to rob the treasury and quite another to filch from the pockets of the people.—Savannah News, Dem.

Exposing the Family Skeleton.

Mrs. Parvenu was entertaining some of the friends she had succeeded in making since Mr. Parvenu had made a fortune, and the conversation had drifted to the subject of old homesteads and the joys of childhood, although there were others besides Mrs. Parvenu who would not have cared to have the real facts in regard to the old homesteads known.

"Ah, those were glorious days," sighed Mrs. Parvenu, when her turn came. "I can recall the old family estate as well as if I had left it but yesterday. You remember, Josiah, that was where you first met me?"

Her husband nodded, being something of a truthful man and not wishing to get his tongue into bad habits.

"There was a freedom in the old life," continued Mrs. Parvenu, "that one cannot enjoy when one becomes a part of the great fashionable world."

"Well, I should say yes," broke in Josiah, feeling that it was time for him to say something to back up his wife. "Why, in those days we didn't use to think nothing of eating pie with a knife."—Chicago Post.

CABBY DENNIS.

"Drive up the Fifth avenue to the Madison Square Garden." He said it in correct English, but after the manner of a Frenchman who had lived in America some 20 years, with a marked foreign accent.

Up Fifth avenue started Cabby Dennis from Twenty-fifth street. Through Twenty-fifth street to Sixth avenue, up Sixth avenue to Thirtieth street, across Thirtieth street to Third avenue, down Third avenue to Twenty-ninth street. It was beginning to take the form of a puzzle, when suddenly De Courcelles aroused himself in his corner.

"Que diable!" he began. Then he looked out of the window. "Twenty-ninth street—where the devil? Either he is a fool or he thinks I am one!" He flung open the carriage door. "Where do you go?" he cried. "I say the Madison Square Garden, and you drive me around and around, God knows where! I report you! I have you arrested! We shall see, we shall see who is the fool!"

Cabby Dennis sat as if petrified; then he climbed down from his seat and sank dramatically on his knees in the falling snow by the open cab door. "I'm a fool, an dat's straight," he said. "I'm wuss nor a fool—I'm hungry. But dat ain't nothin—I can stan it fer meself." De Courcelles looked stern. "But de kids—de kids—I says to meself when you tipped me de sign, 'Here's a fare, here's a fare,' says I, an den you says, 'Madison Square Garden,' says you. Why, Madison Square Garden's jest round de block, not a minit's drive. I taut of de starvin kids—I taut of de poor wife." Dennis brushed away a tear in the now blinding snowstorm. "Here's a cop a-comin along now. Han me over if you wants."

De Courcelles thought of the stories he had heard of impostors, of benevolent men being taken in by just such as Dennis. "Drive back to the restaurant," he said shortly; "drive—straight."

"Hully gee!" muttered Dennis as he climbed up on the box. "Close shave dat. You ain't so sma't as you taut you was!" And both Dennis and his horse hung their heads as they drove back.

"Don't you stir, sir, or I have you arrest," said De Courcelles at the door of the restaurant. Inside he beckoned the waiter. "That stuff I could not eat. Where is it?" he asked.

"Why, monsieur, it is—it is—where should it be, monsieur?" stammered the garcon obsequiously in the presence of such a patron.

"Bring it. It is for a starving family," commanded De Courcelles.

"Very well, monsieur. But not pompano, not redheads, monsieur—a turkey, good beef, a ham."

"Bring them," repeated De Courcelles as he moved to the lobby, where he sat with one eye on the bewildered Dennis and his thoughts with her at the Madison Square Garden.

When De Courcelles emerged laden with packages, he cried: "Now we are going to make the little ones and their mother happy! Where is it you live?"

"Whar is't I live?"

"Yes," cried De Courcelles, fixing him with his glance. "The hungry little ones and the grieving wife—where do they live?"

"Sure—sure—dey lives close by Sussex street—number—number 67."

"Drive there," ordered De Courcelles.

"Hully gee!" muttered Dennis, slowly picking up his reins. "Waal, I'll be durned! If he ain't a smart un wid a-plenty of time on his hands! Hully mother, but it's hard on a man—a respectable, God fearin man!"

Up to 67 rattled the cab. De Courcelles was beginning to have faith in Dennis, and his manner was gentle.

"Sure," said Dennis, "sure I'm thinkin as it's too poor fer a gent like yourself to be goin up into it. If you'll be waitin here widout goin in an gimme de bundles to fotch in meself, wid your compliments"—

"No, no," said De Courcelles. "I must see them—the wife and the little ones."

With the look of a martyred saint Dennis repeated after him: "You must—you must see dem—de wife an de kids. Waal, den," he said slowly, "if you'll hold onter de horse I'll tell 'em you're a-comin."

Up the rickety stairs went Dennis. He paused at Kate Mahoney's door. "She's poor 'nuf, an she have a brood of kids. But Mahoney he's a bit 'streperous, an he might objec'." He scratched his head reflectively and went up another flight. "Dere's Mame Reilly; but Mame she ain't got de sign of a kid. An dere's—hully gosh, dere's Mary Gafferty—Mary Gafferty, wot's supportin of three wid her tubs, an whose husband was kilt in de accidint. Hully Mither, dere's Mary sure 'nuf, an Mary's more nor half in love wid me now. Waal, I'll be everlastin'ly durned!" Dennis went in and closed the door behind him.

Mary Gafferty sat in the midst of an admiring circle of Sussex street friends.

"Sure," she was saying, "he couldn't wait to git the words out, he was that excited. 'Mary,' he says, stumblin all over himself wid emotion, 'Mary,' he says, 'will yer gi' me the joy uv hearin the kids call me fayther?' He was that modest he didn't loike ter come out wid the quistion plain like. An thin, bless yer, if he didn't go to makin Liz an Eddie an Nora say faythe! An thin he wusn't contint till he'd fotched a frien up from out uv the strate wid a ham an a turkey an all the rest uv wot yer eatin. Ach, Michael Dennis, he's the good hearted un! An Liz, whin she sees his frien wid the bundles in his han's an the snow in his beard, Liz, she cries out, 'Why, it's Santa Claus!' An thin he says, 'An wot's yer name?' An Liz, she says smart as yer plaze, 'Liz Gafferty.' An thin Dennis, fur the love uv me, bless him, an not bein willin ter let by anither minit uv his life widout me, Dennis he says as quick as a flash an wid the lovinest look, Dennis he says, 'She's me stepchild, but she's as dear ter me as though she was born a Dennis' An wid thim words, wid his frien a-follerin in his footsteps, he wint out as proud as yer plaze ter work fer the mouths he's fotched upon himself ter feed."—Emma Kaufmann in New York Journal.

Mr. Gladstone In Society.

Although Mr. Gladstone is pre-eminently a talker in society, yet he does not disdain the other arts by which people who dine out contrive to spend their time. In his younger days he used to be noted for singing.

There are legends of the wonderful effect with which he was wont to render a favorite Scottish song, and irreverent gossips have even declared that on one occasion Mr. Gladstone brought down the drawing room by the vivacity and rollicking spirit with which he sang the well known "Camptown Races."

His society has always been an immense addition to the company to which he was invited.—Pearson's Weekly.

Striking.

"Aunty," said Polly, ruefully rubbing her forehead, "that big photograph of you is a striking likeness, isn't it?"

"Do you think so, deary?"

"Yes," said Polly. "It just fell off the mantelpiece and hit me on the forehead."—Harper's Bazar.

Many animals feign illness. In military stables horses are known to have pretended to be lame in order to avoid going to a military exercise. A chimpanzee in the Zoo had been fed on cake when sick. After his recovery he often feigned coughing in order to procure dainties.

SHE OBEYED ORDERS.

Couldn't Be Blamed if Some of the Callers Refused to Give Their Names.

They had been discussing that everlasting servant problem, which can always be depended upon to furnish a topic for conversation when three or four women are gathered together. Each had told of her experience with her "help," when one of them said:

"My new housemaid is the greenest girl you ever saw in your life. Her ignorance is a perpetual source of wonder to me. The day after I got her I went out shopping and told her if any one called during my absence to say I was out and ask his name. These seemed simple instructions, but I thought she would need them.

"When I returned, I asked if anybody had called.

"'Yes, mum; they did,' she replied.

"'Who were they?'

"'They wouldn't tell their names,' she answered.

"'Wouldn't tell their names!' I exclaimed in surprise.

"'Yes, mum; but I think one of them said "bananas" and the other "rags."'

"I demanded further particulars.

"'I tried to tell them you was out and ask their names. You hadn't been gone very long when one of them came. It was the man who called "bananas." I remembered what you said, mum, and I went after him and told him you was out. He asked me if I wanted any bananas, and I told him no; that you was out, and asked what was his name. But he wouldn't tell me. It was the same with the other person who called. He called "rags" and only laughed at me when I ran after him.'"—Chicago Times-Herald.

Teach Spelling From the Blackboard.

A revival of the old fashioned spelling school has been tried in some localities, but only to prove that it does not, as a rule, reach the poor spellers. They stay away from it—they are not wanted in a spelling match. The spelling school was for the glorification of the good spellers. It did something, no doubt, for depraved brain cells before such mysteries were ever heard of in connection with spelling books — before physicial inertia could be charged to weak valvular heart action, and ugly tempers to microbes, and all the rest. The spelling school belongs to a past dispensation, says my friend, but it suggests what might do much for orthography, if the blackboard were made a conspicuous feature and the attention concentrated upon the reading and writing of sentences, of which the following might be an example: "Mr. Wright, the wheelwright, does not write rite rightly," with helpful stories occasionally like that of the teacher who wrote upon the board the three words, "Boys, bees, bear," asking the children to construct and write a sentence in which these words would be used intelligently, one boy giving at once, "Boys bees bear when they goes in swimming."—Jane Marsh Parker in North American Review.

PASSAGE OF THE JAMES.

The Brilliant Military Spectacle Presented by the Advance on Petersburg.

In The Century General Horace Porter writes of "Grant's Dash For Petersburg" in his series of papers on "Campaigning With Grant." Of the passage of the James, General Porter says:

As the general in chief stood upon the bluff on the north bank of the river on the morning of June 15, watching with unusual interest the busy scene spread out before him, it presented a sight which had never been equaled even in his extended experience in all the varied phases of warfare. His cigar had been thrown aside, his hands were clasped behind him, and he seemed lost in the contemplation of the spectacle. The great bridge was the scene of a continuous movement of infantry columns, batteries of artillery and wagon trains. The approaches to the river on both banks were covered with masses of troops moving briskly to their positions or waiting patiently their turn to cross. At the two improvised ferries steamboats were gliding back and forth with the regularity of weavers' shuttles. A fleet of transports covered the surface of the water below the bridge, and gunboats floated lazily upon the stream, guarding the river above.

Drums were beating the march, bands were playing stirring quicksteps, the distant booming of cannon on Warren's front showed that he and the enemy were still exchanging compliments, and mingled with these sounds were the cheers of the sailors, the shouting of the troops, the rumbling of wheels and the shrieks of steam whistles. The bright sun, shining through a clear sky upon the scene, cast its sheen upon the water, was reflected from the burnished gun barrels and glittering cannon, and brought out with increased brilliancy the gay colors of the waving banners. The calmly flowing river reflected the blue of the heavens and mirrored on its surface the beauties of nature that bordered it. The rich grain was standing high in the surrounding fields. The harvest was almost ripe, but the harvesters had fled. The arts of civilization had recoiled before the science of destruction, and in looking from the growing crops to the marching columns the gentle smile of peace contrasted strangely with the savage frown of war.

It was a matchless pageant that could not fail to inspire all beholders with the grandeur of achievement and the majesty of military power. The man whose genius had conceived and whose skill had executed this masterly movement stood watching the spectacle in profound silence. Whether his mind was occupied with the contemplation of its magnitude and success or was busied with maturing plans for the future no one can tell. After a time he woke from his reverie, mounted his horse and gave orders to have headquarters ferried across to the south bank of the river.

HISTORY OF THE PIN.

Its Use In Various Countries and In Different Ages.

As a requisite of the toilet pins were first used in Britain in the latter part of the fifteenth century, says the Boston Commercial Bulletin. They were first made of iron wire, but in 1540 brass ones were imported from France by Catherine Howard, queen of Henry VIII. The prehistoric pin, however, was a thorn or a fishbone, and had no experience with or relation to the dry goods or notion business until Eve improved upon the fig leaf toilet necessities. The natural thorn is still in use in some of the upper Egypt districts, where the Birmingham or the Connecticut article is a prime curiosity and an unpopular innovation.

In the ruins of Pompeii Roman pins of bronze and hairpins of bone or ivory have been disinterred, while ancient Egypt has disclosed the indispensable article having heads of gold. Bronze pins were known to the lake dwellers of Europe, some being artistically ornamented and elaborated with exquisite skill. Some that have come to light were on the duplex type, having double stems, and others the same in form as the safety pins in use at the present time. At first pins were made by fitting a point to a proper length of wire, and then twisting a piece of fine wire around the other extremity or fastening it after twisting in order to form a knob or head. Ultimately these operations were so skillfully conducted that a completely round head was made of a very small size and scarcely showing the nature of its construction.

Previous to the introduction of machinery the pin was, of course, entirely hand made and required a passage through no less than 14 different manipulations before finding its way as a finished product into market. The brass pin which we see today in its perfect form and almost needle pointed is turned out at an almost incredible speed by special machinery, the daily product of Birmingham alone being placed at about 40,000,000.

The solid headed pin, as differing from that just described, was devised by an ingenious Yankee and came into use in 1840. The domestic pin was of sufficient importance in 1543 to warrant an act providing that "no person shall put to sale any pins but such as shall be double headed and have the heads soldered fast to the pin, well smoothed, the shanks well shapen, the point well rounded, filed, canted and sharpened." About 1700 the manufacture of pins became quite a business in Bristol and Birmingham, employing a large number of persons.

The pin industry in the United States was begun by colonists of the Carolinas, but it was not until the year 1836 that it reached any considerable proportions, the pins used coming from England, although the black pins used in black goods came from France. The industry is now largely centered in Connecticut, although there are large factories in Detroit, Cincinnati and various points in the eastern states. As an article of domestic use the modern pin is now practically ubiquitous and indispensable. The tonnage of metals annually used in its manufacture would astound any who have had no interest in looking into the subject, while the number of thousands of operatives employed in the manufacture in this special industry is surprising.

Argentine Railroads.

In the Argentine Republic the service of trains is appallingly irregular, chiefly owing to the bad state of the permanent way, which, when once laid, is left to take care of itself. The permanent way in some parts of the line is in such a dilapidated condition that almost every train is thrown off the rails. This astounding fact is contained in a recent report of the railway concerned. The rate of traveling, too, is astonishing. At one spot, on a go as you please local line, no train ever travels faster than 2¾ miles per hour. One may vary the monotony of the journey by getting out and taking a quiet stroll along the line, or stopping to pick up pretty flowers. There is no fear that the train will catch you up.—Harper's Round Table.

Noticed Before.

"I see that the scientists have discovered that solid metal actually evaporates."

"Gee! I bet that is what comes of all my money."—Indianapolis Journal.

DUE TO A DOG.

"I hope you will thoroughly enjoy your holiday, nurse," said the matron, looking thoughtfully at the slender figure before her.

Nurse Villiers turned away with a smile lingering about her sweet lips. A little worn and tired she looked, for "12 months' hard labor," as she laughingly asserted, "leaves its mark on the fairest face," but the three weeks' rest would soon chase away the lines of care and bring back the hue of health into the thin cheeks.

"I am lucky," she thought, "to have dear old Betty to fall back upon. When papa died and left me a homeless orphan in the old vicarage, I little dreamed that in little more than a year I should be so thankful to pay a visit to my nurse's old farm. I wonder if I shall meet my fate at Brambleton? Fairy tales are out of fashion."

* * * * * * *

"Yes, Miss Eva, the woods are free to people staying at the farm. We have a sort of right of way through them, and it includes our visitors. They all belong to the owner of the park. Who is he? Well, we haven't seen him yet, dearie. I have heard he was a doctor in London, who came quite unexpectedly into the property. He was a distant cousin of old General Upton's, and they say he was very poor. Beyond that we know nothing of him.

Half an hour later a pretty picture met the eye of a wandering squirrel, who looked down from the branch of a neighboring tree in surprise at the sight of a visitor. Nurse Villiers was seated on a mossy bank, with her head against the trunk of a fallen oak, eagerly devouring the last chapter of her novel. Her eyes filled with tears as she read.

"Poor Trilby," she said half aloud, "and poor little Billie!" Then, womanlike, she turned to the earlier chapters and read again the description of those wonderful white feet. As a sequence her eye traveled downward to her own daintily shod pedal extremities. "Now, I have a pretty foot," she thought, "but I could never be a Trilby. I am not bad looking, but I cannot sing. Still, my foot is really presentable."

She looked cautiously round, and, acting on impulse, slipped off the little bronze shoe and silken stocking and gazed with no small degree of satisfaction at the bit of marblelike flesh lying so white against the green moss. Then she slowly drew on the stocking, leaving the dainty bit of bronze lenther on the ground at a little distance.

Her head drooped against the trunk of the tree, and in a few moments she was fast asleep. She did not hear the crackling of the underwood as a large retriever dog pushed his way through the bushes. She did not see him as, with a knowing look at the sleeper, he seized the little shoe between his teeth and made off with it, to drop it some ten minutes later at the feet of his astonished master, Dr. Gilbert Fanshawe, the owner of the park.

But it was with a rueful face, after much fruitless search, that she limped her way back to the farm, rating herself soundly for the vanity that had caused her discomfiture and her unlucky 40 winks.

* * * * * * *

"Fanshawe, old boy, I'm awfully glad to see you; but I'm in an awful fix. Here's my uncle taken suddenly ill and has sent for me in a hurry. The junior house surgeon is off for a holiday, and I can't go at a moment's notice without a substitute! What am I to do? Would you do? Rather! But you wouldn't stay. You would, you say? You always were a brick. They all know you by repute, so there won't be any bother about that. Your treatise on tuberculosis in children has made your name for you here as in London."

And the house surgeon at St. Philip's, Bardsley, wrung his friend's hands in an excess of gratitude.

The two friends went off together, Fanshawe's dark, intellectual face and tall form in strong contrast with his companion's rubicund cheeks, cheery manner and somewhat stunted proportions.

That night as Dr. Fanshawe went his midnight round he came upon a vision. In the spot of light thrown by the reflector lamp sat a girl with a child in her arms. Her fair hair was like an aureole round her sweet face, and the look of love and pity in her eyes as she bent over the little one stamped itself upon his memory forever. She looked up, and their eyes met. In that one glance some of Dr. Fanshawe's heart slipped out of his keeping, and Eva Villiers was the happy possessor.

* * * * * * *

"I never thought one odd shoe would be of any use," said Nurse Villiers, holding it up for inspection, "but little Jenny Williams will be glad of it, since her foot was amputated." She placed it on her table, to be ready for the morning.

The sister laughed and went down stairs. A shadow darkened the doorway, and Dr. Fanshawe's voice said:

"Nurse, how are your patients tonight?" Then, advancing into the little room, he caught sight of the shoe on the table. "Whose is this?" he said eagerly. "And where is the other?"

"It was mine," answered Eva. "But as to the other I cannot tell you that, for it mysteriously disappeared six weeks ago."

His heart began to beat rapidly.

"Nurse," said he, "in the story of Cinderella, the prince, when he found the wearer of the slipper, took her for his bride. Is it not so?"

"Yes," was the reply. "But I cannot see what this has to do with my shoe."

He drew from the pocket of his shooting coat—worn for the first time since his walk in the wood six weeks before—the counterpart of the little bronze shoe and placed it on the table beside its fellow.

"History repeats itself, we are told," said he. "Shall the old fairy tale have a modern equivalent?"

* * * * * * *

After all, Jenny Williams did not have the shoe. To her great grief, she had a new night nurse instead. And at the wedding every one was surprised by seeing a large retriever dog receiving a great amount of attention. His new mistress has changed his name from Rover to Fate.

"For," said she, "it was he who brought us together and converted me into 'A Modern Cinderella,'"—Forget Me Not.

Worked the Two Actors.

Roland Reed tells this story: "Mr. Jefferson and I happened to be in New Orleans at the same time some years ago, and Mr. Jefferson was to deliver a lecture for an entertainment that was a benefit for some hospital there. At his request I also made a few remarks, and afterward we stood together in the foyer, and Senator Jones introduced us to the people who presented themselves. Punch was flowing, and both Mr. Jefferson and myself were much taken with the handsome young woman who was serving it. We became so interested in her that we finally sat down where we could look at her better. In a moment or two we were delighted to see that she was making her way toward us. She had with her two cards and asked us if we wouldn't write our names on them. Autographs, of course, we thought, and were delighted to do that for her. We hardly looked at the cards. After we had written she informed us that it was for some charity or other, and, thus jarred, we took a more extended look at the cards. We had signed a promise to pay $5 each. Mr. Jefferson and I looked at each other sorrowfully, and his hand started down in his pocket. So did mine. We each put up our $5 and went home soon afterward. It was a clear case of 'worked.'"

NAVAL MISHAPS.

We Make Too Much Fuss and Sensation Over Trifles.

We have a good navy, and we do not appreciate it. As a matter of fact, casualties to our new armorclads and cruisers have not been particularly frequent when their size and their number are considered. In this country every trivial mischance is caught up and exploited by the sensational newspapers, but nothing is said of similar accidents in foreign navies. Barring the destruction of Admiral Kimberly's fleet by the Samoan hurricane in 1889, which no skill or foresight could have prevented, our naval service for many years has been remarkably free from really serious disasters.

There is nothing in our records to compare with the capsizing of the British frigate Captain with half a thousand men in 1870, or the fatal collision of the British ironclads Vanguard and Iron Duke in 1875, or that of the German ironclad Kaiser Wilhelm and Grosser Kurfurst the year following, when 300 men perished, or the loss of the British training ships Eurydice and Atlanta in 1878 and 1880 with 600 officers, sailors and apprentice boys, or the sinking of the British flagship Victoria, with Admiral Tryon, 22 officers and 330 sailors, by collision with the Camperdown on June 22, 1893, in the Mediterranean, or the wreck of the Spanish cruiser Reina Regente, on March 10, 1895, with 420 officers and seamen.

The list of minor accidents to foreign naval vessels in the past few years would be too long to enumerate. But the stranding of the British ironclads Howe and Anson, the flagship Amphion and the cruiser Sultan were far more grave affairs than any such accidents which have occurred to any of our own heavy vessels within this period. We have had our fair share of troubles, perhaps, but no more than that.—Boston Journal.

An Ancient Joke.

"Pretty good show this year, I think," said Adam as he and Noah walked through the garden.

"Fair," said Noah. "Pretty fair. You ought to have seen the canine department on the ark, though, Adam. That was a daisy."

"It needed to be, with two of every kind," said Adam. "Were they on the ark itself?"

"Yes. Why not?"

"Oh, I didn't know but what you made them sail on their own barks," said Adam.—Harper's Bazar.

THURSDAY MORNING, AUG. 12, 1897

BRACKETT LYNCHED.

MISS HENDERSON'S ASSAILANT HANGED BY A MOB.

Spirited from the Jail by Officers But Pursued and Captured by the Lynchers —Militia Called Out Too Late to Interfere.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., August 11.—Bob Brackett, the negro assailant of Miss Kittie Henderson, was lynched this afternoon. As announced in an Associated Press dispatch last night, a mob broke into the jail at this place and commenced to batter down the steel doors that led to the cells. The doors soon yielded and it was then discovered that Brackett had been spirited away by the officers. All the prisoners in the jail were liberated.

Pursuit of the officers was at once commenced and a crowd caught up with them at Terrell station, on the Southern Railway eighteen miles east of Asheville early this morning. Brackett was taken from his protectors but the mob could not agree as to the disposition of him. Some wished to hang him there, but the stronger party decided to take him back to the vicinity of his crime. It was 4.35 a. m. when the party started out afoot, leading the negro, now nearly exhausted and seemingly only half conscious, though he had not been ill-treated. Breakfast was had with a farmer, the negro having his share, and then the walk of some twelve miles was resumed.

The route was through a deep ravine, between towering mountains. At noon Hemphill's school house was reached, and there the party was informed that the Asheville militia had been called out and were on their way to meet the mob. After consultation Miss Kittie Henderson, the negro's victim, was sent for—four and a half miles away—that she might see her assailant hanged. When she arrived the negro was strung up, so quietly that half the hangers on, who had gathered from the country around, did not know that it had been done. No shots were fired, and the mob dispersed after a half hour, leaving the body hanging.

At no time was it possible for the militia to have interfered.

This is the third lynching in Buncombe county in twelve years.

THE ASSASSIN GOLLI

Taken to Verara to be Tried—Two Anarchist Leaders Expelled from France.

By Cable to the Morning Star.

MADRID, August 11.—Golli, the Anarchist assassin of the Spanish Prime Minister, was taken to-day from Santa Agueda to Verara, where he will be tried. On arriving at his destination Golli said: "My Calvary has commenced. A priest will try to convert me, and the usual comedy will be gone through. I remember what happened to the others," mentioning the names of all the Anarchists who have been executed in France and Spain.

PARIS, August 11.—A warrant has been issued for the expulsion from France of Tarrida Marmol, the Spanish Anarchist who, within the course of a speech which he made on Sunday last at a special performance given at the Theatre de la Republique for the benefit of the Spanish refugees in Paris, urged that Senor Canovas del Castillo, the Spanish Premier, should be assassinated.

Marmol, who was formerly a prisoner in the fortress of Montjuich at Barcelona, is believed to have started for England yesterday. The French authorities have resolved to expel a number of other Anarchists from France.

LONDON, August 11.—A special dispatch from Paris says that Pianas, another leader of the Spanish Anarchists, has also been expelled from France, being conducted to Havre, from which port he will go to New York. Both Marmol and Pianas, the dispatch adds, called themselves Cuban patriots.

THE GLUCOSE TRUST.

Injunction in the Way of the Combination Dissolved and the Agreement Perfected.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

PEORIA, ILL., August 11.—The injunction which stood in the way of the glucose combination by restraining the sale to it of the plant of the American Glucose Company of this city, was dissolved this afternoon and the transfer took place immediately, a certified check for over two million dollars being passed in order to forestall any similar attempts at complication. All the options on the other glucose plants were still pending, as it was part of the agreement that it should be void unless all the plants went into combination, but the papers passed as soon as the news of the decison was received. The application for a dissolution of the injunction was argued all day and was granted by the court without comment. Mr. Harding, who served the injunction, says he will continue the fight.

VIRGINIA DEMOCRATS.

STATE CONVENTION IN ISESSION AT ROANOKE.

Harmonious Assemblage—Tyler Nominated By Acclamation For Governor—Echols Leads in the Race For Lieutenant Governor.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

ROANOKE, VA., August 11.—The Democratic State convention was called to order at noon to-day in the Academy of Music. As the chairman of the State committee, Hon. J. Taylor Ellyson, is a candidate for Governor, the duty of calling the convention to order devolved upon Gen. George J. Huntley. Nearly or quite all of the 1,548 members of the body were present or represented by proxy.

A determined fight will be over the proposition to adopt a plan for nominating United States Senators by primary.

Mr. S. D. Letcher, of Lexington, the temporary chairman of the convention, was introduced by Gen. Huntley as the representative of the "Young Democracy" of Virginia. Every reference by the temporary chairman to Bryan and the Chicago platform was heartily cheered. He reminded the convention that the fight for free silver is not yet over, "but will have to be fought from year to year until victory be won."

The speaker made a vigorous defence of the Chicago platform, and especially the planks favoring a general income tax and denying government by injunction. His denunciation of the "deep damnation" of the Dingley tariff law was received with cheers.

At 1 o'clock the convention took a recess until 8 this afternoon.

At the afternoon session Mr. E. W. Saunders, of Franklin county, was made permanent chairman without opposition and Col. John Bell Bigger, the temporary secretary, was continued as the permanent one.

Mr. Saunders addressed the convention. Every denunciation of the gold standard elicited applause from the convention. The first considerable outburst of applause was evoked by the declaration that William J. Bryan will be President in 1900. At the conclusion of his speech Mr. Saunders was given a hearty ovation.

On motion of Mr. Graves, of Culpepper, the convention, by a rising vote, adopted resolutions eulogizing the purity of character and the efficient services rendered the State by the late Attorney General, R. Taylor Scott. The action of the board in appointing his son to fill the unexpired term of the deceased was also endorsed.

At this point, Judge Samuel Williams, of Wythe, presented a communication from the committee appointed by the Populist State convention, which nominated Edward R. Cocke for Lieutenant Governor. This communication, which is signed by General James G. Field and the three other members of the committee, simply advised the Democratic body of the action of that by which they were created; of the nomination by it of Mr. Cocke. Coupled with the presentation of the paper was the suggestion of Judge Williams that Mr. Hale, of Franklin, one of the members of the committee, be accorded a seat upon the floor of the convention. This was agreed to after some discussion. The convention, by a practically unanimous vote, decided to send the communication to the Committee on Resolutions. The point, however, was subsequently made and sustained, that no definite action could be taken on any such proposition until after the convention had been permanently organized. This incident was the first one in which there has been any reference made to the Populists or the action taken by that party at its recent State convention.

A communication from the Committee on Credentials informed the convention it would occupy at least two hours on the contest from Washington county.

The convention at 5 o'clock took a recess until 8 o'clock to-night.

After the night session had been called to order, Mr. Carter Glass, of the Lynchburg News, placed before the convention the name of J. Hoge Tyler, of Pulaski, for the gubernatorial nomination.

The mention of this name called forth tumultuous applause. Mr. Glass' reference to Hoge Tyler being a Democrat, and if nominated he would be elected, "and stay a Democrat," was thoroughly understood by the convention and received with a storm of applause. At the conclusion of the first seconding speech for Tyler, Hon. J. Taylor Ellyson, who was his only opponent, in a brief but eloquent speech, moved to make the nomination of his competitor unanimous.

This proposition was received with wild applause, and the scene which followed was the only dramatic one of the day.

When Mr. Ellyson took his seat, on motion of Mr. Willard, of Loudoun, the convention, by a rising vote, unanimously re-elected that gentleman chairman of the State committee.

At this point Senator Daniel, who was the chairman of the Committee on Platform, made his appearance before the convention for the first time. His presence was the signal for tremendous cheering. The Senator acknowledged this reception with one of his popular and characteristic addresses.

Mr. Ellyson's proposition was carried with a wild hurrah, and J. Hoge Tyler, of Pulaski, was declared the nominee of the convention for Governor.

The most interesting feature of the convention and one which may prove of far-reaching importance in the politics of this State, was the providing for the nomination of United States Senators by primary election.

This subject, which was only begun to be agitated in Virginia a few week ago, has pretty well overshadowed the ordinary progress of State conventions. The most conspicuous champion of the primary plan has been Congressman W. A. Jones, of the First district. The proposition came up in the committee on platform this afternoon, and was carried by a vote of fourteen to fifteen. It did not win, however, until after a determined fight had been made against it. Hon. John W. Daniel, the senior Senator, made an eloquent speech in opposition to the plan. He protested that the suggestion contemplated an evasion of the constitution. The primary is not proposed to be put into operation for two years and hence does not affect Senator Daniel, whose nomination is practically accomplished. The most active advocate before the committee for the primary, beside Congressman Jones, was Mr. Walter.

The following candidates were placed in nomination for Lieutenant Governor: Cook, of Norfolk; A. L. Buford, Edmund R. Cocke, of Cumberland (also nominee of the Populists for the same place); J. T. Ellyson Caton, of Alexandria; Edward Echols, Augusta; Merritt T. Cook, Norfolk, and Brockenbrough. The first ballot resulted in a failure to nominate. Echols leading in the race.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

A Brewery Plant at New Orleans Badly Damaged.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW ORLEANS, August 11.—A bolt of lightning this morning did considerable damage at the American brewery. It struck the brick work of two immense batteries of boilers, by which the machinery of the plant is operated and almost completely destroyed it. One of the boilers was undermined and fell to the ground. The other boiler was not as badly damaged. Dan Mars was scalded by escaping steam and may die; Pat Maher, a laborer, was struck by a brick. The accident was one of the most peculiar that has ever happened in the city.

OHIO POPULISTS.

State Convention—Fusion Predicted—Full Ticket Nominated—Coxey for Governor—Charges of Bribery—A Free Fight.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Aug. 11.—Fusion was repudiated to-day by the Populists of Ohio in a manner so emphatic as to leave no chance for controversy regarding the future policy of the party. The Populist State Convention, by an overwhelming majority, severed the alliance made a year ago with the Democracy on the free silver issue and nominated a full State ticket, headed by Jacob Coxey, of "commonweal" fame, as the nominee for Governor.

Turbulent scenes marked the opening of the convention. The anti-fusionists had swept everything before them, capturing the temporary and permanent organization and all the committees and they were on their mettle. Nor was the policy adopted by the fusionists calculated to temper the feeling which had been aroused among the middle-of-the road delegates. The threat of the fusionists to explode a bomb in the convention was like flaunting a red flag and when the convention assembled the delegates were ready for any surprise that might be sprung.

The report of the Committee on Rules and Order of Business brought the promised sensation. The report provided that no speech should exceed five minutes, regardless of the subject discussed. Several delegates immediately joined in a protest against this provision, claiming that it was contrary to the fundamental principles of the People's party, and an amendment was offered to strike out of the report the obnoxious section. Finally Peter Witt, of Cleveland, secured recognition from Chairman Seitz and mounting a chair proceeded to denounce the committee making the report and asserted that the convention had been bought out by Mark Hanna. He claimed he had proof that some delegates had been bribed by the Republicans. As Witt waved aloft in his hand a piece of paper which he claimed was a check that had been to given one of the delegates by an agent of Mark Hanna, he launched into a bitter invective against the anti-fusionists, charging that all of them had been corrupted by Hanna money. A score of delegates were on their feet in an instant, crowding around the chair on which Witt stood. When one of the delegates attempted to pull Witt off the chair, the latter struck at the delegate and a general melee ensued, in which several blows were exchanged and chairs raised aloft in a threatening manner. A policeman who was present rushed in and interrupted the hostilities and a few minutes later a platoon of police reached the convention hall and quiet was restored.

At the afternoon session the following State ticket was nominated: For Governor, Jacob Coxey, Stark county; Lieutenant Governor, Orris Whitcomb, Tuscararawas county; Supreme Judge, D. C. Pomeroy; Attorney General, C. A. Reider, Wayne county; State Treasurer, F. M. Morris, Anglaise county.

The convention remained in session until after 6 o'clock awaiting the report of the committee appointed to investigate the bribery charge, but it was not forthcoming and the convention adjourned sine die with the understanding that the committee would report to the State Central Committee.

Sixty Thousand Volunteers in Spain Awaiting the Signal of Don Carlos.

FACTS!

We Copy From the "Dry Goods Chronicle" of July 24th, the Following

High Prices for Carpets.

"And talking of carpets and carpet people, are you fully aware of what the new tariff means to the carpet buyer? Under the McKinley bill the price of carpets was 10 cents higher than they are to-day, and the new duty, as provided by the Dingley bill, on raw materials that enter into the manufacture of carpets is higher than under the McKinley bill. Naturally prices have to go up. Present prices can last only until the present stock of raw material is exhausted. The stock of carpet wool on hand is very light. The wise buyer will place his order without delay. Carpets will never be so cheap again in the next three years."
